“ Yesterday, I had to get a blood test, when I saw my blood, I started crying. I remembered when, long ago, I drove you to dentist to have your wisdom tooth removed. As I had planned to be a dental technician, the dentist asked if I would like to observe. I only remember a short observation. When I awoke from my faint, I was laying on a couch, you, dear sweet sister, were standing over me, laughing (such a sweet laugh), you drove me home. The end of my dental career. I shall miss you. You were there for me all through my childhood. I love you dearly. Keep a space for me there in heaven beside you.
