“ I remember first meeting Joe in the hospital. Vibrant and full of life despite being sick. We made plans to get together at the cafe for coffee. Some time later he and I met for breakfast, talked, and agreed to meet again. We did and our friendship grew from that point on. I would visit him in his home and we would just talk about nothing and everything. I remember the last words we spoke to each other, “I’m sure I’ll see you again.” Joe you remind me of my dad and for me was one of the strong points of our friendship. You are an exceptional human being and friend and I will miss you, but rest assured, we will meet again. Until then my friend. ST
