“ Well, LarryThePumpjackMan... here's to another year that you've been gone! It doesn't seem real most every day... but some days the tears keep coming! I went to meet with Home Line Baptist Church on Sunday. It was their Grand Opening for the new building. It was something I know you would have been overjoyed to see. I know you were a part of everything! Hearing stories from a few different men who knew you, it was a great Lord's Day as we shared laughter, and tears in recalling and sharing those memories. Pastor Foreman let me share a few memories and praise with everyone. I thanked them for praying for me while we were separated for all those years. I thanked everyone for their kindness in loving you. I love you so much. I miss you beyond words. I'd give just about anything for one of your daddy hugs! I miss the way you would say, "Kid, I love you!" I'd love smile, you'd ask me, "How do you know I love you?" I'd often reply with tears because I was too overwhelmed with ways I knew you loved me. One I replied with most often was, "because you love my moma". We knew how much you loved her, even in everything! I also said I knew because of the look i saw in your eyes when you told me, all the extra hugs, the special moments we shared, everything that you did for Kevin and I. I'm so glad you had time alone with The Lord. I know you loved Him. I saw it every time you started the church bus! I heard it when I'd hear you pray or sing to Him. I believe that you longed for Him just as I do now. I still have much here to do. I'm so thankful for you. I'm very thankful we had the time on this earth together. Most importantly, I'm so blessed and overjoyed that I was chosen to be your Daughter and you were my Daddy! I'm sharing The Good News every chance I can! I love you, "Kid". Hug Kevin for me and my babies too! See you soon.
