“ I was in Texas visiting last summer...I had made spaghetti for dinner in which I added bayeaves to the sauce. The next day he had leftovers and pulled out a bayleaf. He said to me, "You're not supposed to leave them in your food after cooking as they keep seasoning the food even after you put it on the fridge " He also said, "You should know what every spice you use tastes like on it's own before you use it. He was a good man.
